

General Practice Skin Cancer Study

Help us find simpler ways to detect skin cancer

Your clinic is involved in the New Zealand General Practice Dermoscopy Study. The study is comparing standard methods of skin cancer detection with the dermoscopic (microscopic skin check) method. We want to determine if skin cancer can be detected earlier and easier in General Practice.

You may be asked to participate in this study.

Information about the study is available at the reception counter.